NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The fans turned away when they saw the huge jam around the gates. Following are the figures:

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special]— Brute Force not only deserted the Yankees today but switched over to the Giants and helped them beat the Hugging outfit in the third game of the series. On the other hand, Old Man Strategy kept out of the combat entirely.

In other words, there was a great pitching duel staged between Art Nehl of McGraw's team and Sad Sam Jones of the Yanks, and if Brute Force had not stepped in and taken a hand the two might have labored until darkness stopped the battle. As it was, the Giants won, 1 to 0, because Brute Force made a pal out of Casey Stengel, who slammed a home run into the right field bleachers in the seventh for the only run of the game.

Casey the Hero.

So far Casey is leading hero of the series. His blunder in the last inning of the first game bringing victory to the Giants, and his home run being the only successful attack of the contest.

The Yanks might have had a chance had they been able to snare Brute Force for Strategy, but they stumbled through with no luck and no outside help, and as they have showed time and again in the past, they do not know how to win a ball game when they are required to do something more than try to knock the cover off the ball.

LABOR STRIDES TO GOLDEN DAY,

Gompers Points Way
at Final Session.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 12.—[Special.]

Gompers' path is plain. It is first of all, an American way, marked out by constitutional rights and limitations. It means for the present soft union organization lines. Presenting a sharp cleavage from the undemocratic European labor movement and even from the politically minded British movement, it has no room for the international communists and little patience with the intellectuals or pinks. It has no care-all for the social evils of the world and its content to make things better now for the average worker.

This might be said to express the philosophy of the labor movement as expressed through the deliberations of the forty-third convention of the American Federation of Labor, which closed today.

GOMPERS ANALYZES ISSUES.

Samuel Gompers immediately following his reelection as president of the federation today, analyzed the work of the convention in broad terms and explained the meaning of the outstanding actions. The most important action, he declared, was to drive from the labor movement those who were antagonistic to the union idea and policy.

"There has been a full, free, and open forum," he said. "Our antagonists may point to an incident in the convention and undertake to deny this. The answer is that this is a convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Boring from Within Is Out.

"Differences of opinion are invited, but they must be within the labor movement, not for its destruction. We have been too tolerant of men who declare they are 'boring from within,' seeking to undermine the policies of the federation, men who secretly go into the woods at midnight, planning to destroy the trade union movement."

"I am informed that William F. Dunnin who was ousted from the convention was not elected a delegate from the Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council, but that he solicited credentials with the understanding that the Silver Bow Council would not have to pay his expenses. Why should Dunnin come to this convention and relieve the Silver Bow Council from paying his expenses? Whence comes this plethora of money?"

Tales of Foster's "Nerve."

"A few months ago in Chicago at a conference of labor men, W. Z. Foster referred to me to give him a clean bill of health as to his conduct. I told him that he had deceived and tried to deceive a lot of men, and how I, too, had been deceived for a time by his declarations of loyalty to trade unionism.

"The enemies of our movement take delight in emphasizing the fact that there has been a diminution in the membership of the affiliated unions.

Of course we have lost some members.

Consider that for nearly two years from five to five and a half million workers were unemployed. Assuming one man and a half or two millions were union men, they could not pay their dues. The membership report is an average for the period from June, 1922 to Sept. 1923, a period of unemployments and strikes.

"To say our organization is decaying is a trifle. We maintained morale, spirit, membership, despite the drive of every employer antagonistic to us.

MILD REBELLION FOR BANNERS.

"The American Bankers' association at its recent convention agreed that there must be wage reductions. Why don't they do the same themselves?"

"It is to be expected. We can meet it and beat it anywhere. It is different in the back."

"This convention has given notice to all who want to dominate the labor movement, who are antagonistic to it.

It will encourage trade unionism, to greater solidarity, to give voice to the unorganized, and give notice to those who would destroy it that this is an American labor movement, for and by the workers, not by any so-called intelligentsia."

ROGERS PARK, IN PROTEST, DENIES INFUX OF VICE

Assails Organizers of Law and Order League.

Residents of Rogers Park and the real estate dealers of that community met last night in protest against the protest against the "influx of vice" in their neighborhood. They spoke in condemnation of the organizers and board of governors of the "North Shore Law and Order League," which they said, had defamed Rogers Park.

Rogers Park needs no law and order league, it was maintained. The citizens want the police to do their duty and to protect them, which they said had been done.

It developed at the meeting that the sponsors of the league had not invited Mayor Dever or Chief Collins, who live in their section of the city, to join the law and order movement. Neither had they asked the aldermen of the three wards comprising Rogers Park and Edgewater, nor the police captain to join, the sponsor of the league, E. F. Driver, 1015 Loyola avenue, admitted previous to the meeting.

Asked by Driver to join.

Mr. Driver refused to discuss himself, his motives or his associates. He said he is in the canvas goods business. Some of them listed on the board of governors of the league were said to be close friends of his. Mr. Driver's son, said his name was used with his knowledge or permission.

Attorney William H. Sexton, traction counsel for the city and who is on the board of governors of the league, said he did not consider it a slight to Mayor Dever and Chief Collins not to ask them to join a law and order league in their own neighborhood.

Captain Larkin of the Rogers Park station, present at last night's meeting, said he considered the movement such a reflection. His record and efficiency were praised by the business men there.

Henry S. Jacobs, a real estate dealer, was chairman of the meeting.

No Questionable Tenants.

Real estate men said there had been no rejections of prospective apartment tenants as stated by the league organizers. The tenancy requirements are strict, however, and those who have never agreed to them, themselves, have agreed to them.

They objected strenuously to being "hooked up" with other questionable districts.

A paragraph from the league's letter seeking membership at $100 per application we read:

"The beautiful north shore is in jeopardy. So many immoral influences are at work throughout our north side that before we know it, refined, moral people will be ashamed to live in many of our present high class residential neighborhoods."

This drew bitter denunciation.

Calls Plans Ridiculous.

H. C. W. Lubenheimer, representing the Devon Trust and Savings bank, formerly chief deputy sheriff, branded as ridiculous the plans of the league to require immediate tenancy to the state's attorney's office and the deputy sheriff's in raiding them. He suspected politics in the organization.

He said he would not be a party to it.

The incident, he said, has turned into a great political issue.

Miss Elizabeth L. Green, appearing at the Apollo tea room, commented upon the possible effects of prohibited liquor and chloroform on young strangers to Chicago.

Miss Davis, who was at the tea room, said she found herself on Grand boulevard, near Jewelry Avenue, at 12:30 a.m., and saw a man in a dark suit and hat, who was evidently a detective, questioning Miss Lorraine, 221 State street, the cafe, who was a stranger.

When Miss Davis was asked if she was a member of the North Shore Law and Order League, she said she was not.

She said she was a member of the Greenwich League, which is interested in the possible effects of prohibited liquor and chloroform on young strangers to Chicago.

ROGERS PARK, IN PROTEST, DENIES INFUX OF VICE

Assails Organizers of Law and Order League.

Bustlers of Rogers Park and the real estate dealers of that community last night in indignation and protest against the "slander on the fair name of their neighborhood." They spoke in condemnation of the organizers and board of governors of the "North Shore Law and Order League," which, they said, had defamed Rogers Park.

Rogers Park needs no law and order league, it was proclaimed. The citizens challenged the motives and questioned the identity of the promoters of the league, which they said had spread the imputation that there had been an influx of doubtful women into the northernmost section of Chicago. Rogers Park is a respectable and decent, safe, and needs no "defenders" save for motives of their own to bring a smutch on the reputation of the community."

It developed at the meeting that the sponsor of the league had not invited Mayor Dever or Chief Collins, who live in their section of the city, to join the law and order movement. Neither had they asked the aldermen of the three wards comprising Rogers Park and Edgewater, nor the police captain to join the sponsor of the league, E. F. Driver, 1025 Loyola avenue, admitted previous to the meeting.

Asked by Driver to join,

Mr. Driver refused to discuss himself, his motives or his associates. He said he is in the canvas goods business. Several of those listed on the board of governors said they were asked by Driver to join. One, Charles W. Ferguson, said his name was used without his knowledge or permission.

Attorney William H. Sexton, traction counsel for the city and who is on the board of governors of the league, said he did not consider it a slight to Mayor Dever or Chief Collins not to ask them to join in the law and order league in their own neighborhood.

Capt. James Larkin of the Rogers Park station, present at last night's meeting, said he considered the movement such a reflection. His record and efficiency were praised by the bustlers.

Henry S. Jacobs, a real estate dealer, was chairman of the meeting.

No Questionable Tenants.

Real estate men said there had been no increase of prospective apartment tenants, as stated by the league organizers. The tenantry in Rogers Park is so strict that questionable women have never tried to establish themselves there, according to all. They objected strenuously to being "hooked up" with other questionable districts.

A paragraph from the league's letter seeking membership at $100 per applicant read:

"The beautiful north shore is in jeopardy! So many degenerates, immoral influences are at work throughout our north side that before we know it refined, moral people will be ashamed to live in many of our present high class residential neighborhoods."

This drew bitter denunciation.

Call Plans Ridiculed.

H. C. W. Laubenheimer, representing the Devon Trust and Savings bank, the chief deity said, responded as follows to the plan of the league to report immoral tenants to the state's attorney's office and use deputy sheriffs in raiding them. He suspected politics in the organization, he said.

FOLLIES GIRL TELLS STORY OF STOLEN JEWELS

While Chief of Police Morgan A. Collier yesterday was waging a new drive to dry up the supposedly wild loop, Miss Ethel Davis, comedienne of the Greenwich Follies company appearing at the Apollo theater, ruefully reflected upon the possible danger of prohibited liquor and allowing dapper young men to escort her home.

Miss Davis was questioned in the detective bureau last night in the presence of Victor Weinschank of 1617 Wabash avenue, who was held in connection with the robbery.

The incident which plunged Miss Davis into a gloomy retrospective and determined the police chief to tighten the noose upon the cabarets had its inception at the Follies' Inn, 345 South Wabash Avenue, last Wednesday night.

After spending an hour with another party Miss Davis accepted the invitation to the full with its fascinating scenery of woods and quiet lakes.

When Miss Davis' awoke, she says, she found herself lying in a doorway on Grand boulevard, near Bowen Avenue, Jewelry to the value of $100 was missing, she believed. F. K. Reamer, 721 Golden avenue, doorman at the cafe, who introduced Miss Davis to the strangers, was arrested.

Against Greece.

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service) (Continued from page 1) LONDON, Oct. 12.—(Tribune Radio)—It is stated here tonight that (the verdict of the council of ambassadors), which awarded a $5,000,000 lire ($5,000,000) fine against Greece to Italy, was subjected to much searching comment on the part of the empire members, during the discussion of league of nations affairs yesterday. Heavily censored extracts from the debate were made public today.

Further discussion of the dispute, now being held at Geneva, is expected to be formal resolution relating to the league of nations is offered.

It is reported that Lord Curzon gave a varnished account of the diplomatic intrigues leading up to and subsequent to the incidents, and it is suggested by his attitude that he himself is far from satisfied with the course pursued by the allies in bowing to Italy's demands.

"Expect Too Much from League."

Lord Robert Cecil's speech as usual was simply a review of the work of the league generally.

Prime Minister Massey of New Zealand was quoted as saying that he never was an enthusiastic supporter of the league, but in this case he thought too much was expected from it, and some of the more ardent supporters of the league were responsible for the public's disappointment in its achievements.

Prince Bruce of Australia said that he recognized that the league would never likely do what all hoped so long as there were great nations outside, but this was no reason to think that the situation was hopeless.

Pledge From Ireland.

John MacNeill of Ireland made a remarkable speech in which he pledged Ireland to help in forcing league decisions.

"If the league of nations required a certain amount of duty done, a certain amount of pressure in whatever form desired, I am perfectly certain that the nation which is doing that duty," Mr. MacNeill asserted.

The Irish representative also said that he had found at Geneva, as a result of the recent happenings, a feeling of dissatisfaction among the smaller nations and a desire that the objects of the league be made effective.

Ever since in the east is determined on self-government. Miss Jane Addams' speech last night was basic, just given for her at the City club under direction of Herbert E. Fleming, executive secretary, and Henry Chandler, president. It is Korea for the Koreans; India for the Indians, until Miss Addams pointed out, "frequently the native wife would mean, jokingly, to us, 'O, if your president had never come, that phrase, how happy we'd be!'

It is a mistake, Miss Addams warned, to think of China and Japan as remote, uncivilized. "In China," she said, "I was told that the bandits had learned how to it from America. Many places. And a famous Chinese admiral told me once in our country, on his way to Yalo, he had been the victim of bandits—James Jones and his gang."

BARREL CLAD WOMAN SOUGHT IN LAKE COUNTY

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 12.—Deputy sheriffs of Lake county are again divided into three factions tonight. Some are hunting for a woman drowned in a barrel, others are searching with guns for the attackers of the woman, and the third party is sitting still, incensed at an attempted hoax on the north of Waukegan.

The division arose when a woman's clothing, from outer garments to silk hose and shoes, were found draped Christmas tree fashion on the branches of a tree in Darow road, famous as "Lovers' lane," a crossroad three miles north of Waukegan.

The authorities are puzzled by the good quality of the garments. Their cost is estimated at $150 or more.

Stephen Clunies, a member of the University of Chicago freshman football team, was crushed with speeding and assault with a deadly weapon yesterday after the automobile he was driving struck and severely injured Harry Jaschinski, 8 years old, 5116 Euclid avenue.

According to the police, Clunies tried to escape after striking another car. His two fellowmen saw the car dash by them shortly before the accident and gave chase.

FORD RECKLESS OF FACTS, SAY
WEEKS IN REP

Gorgas Plant but Adjunto of Muscle Shoals.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT
Washington, D. C., Oct. 12)—
Chief Secretary of War John Weeks today replied to the statement of Henry Ford relative to the sale of the Gorgas steam plant, part of the Muscle Shoals project, to the Alabama Power company.

The secretary characterized Ford's statement as "a personal attack on me in connection with conduct of the administration." He denied the statement is "filled with falsehoods."

He suggested that Mr. Ford, in as far as he does upon other persons the conduct of so many enterprises probably was not in possession of real facts, and pointed out that fact that Mr. Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals has not been withdrawn when he says that he does not regard the Gorgas steam plant as a necessity to him in carrying out his plan to purchase and develop Muscle Shoals water power.

Reply to Hill.

The secretaries' statement, which was issued after two long conferences with President Coolidge, is much more in tone than had been expected, in the most part it confines itself to statement of the "facts in the case with a review of the incidents leading up to the sale of the Gorgas plant to the government to the Alabama Power company.

It points out that the original contract with the Alabama Power company, by which that concern was given the right to purchase the Gorgas plant within a given time, was made by the Wilson administration, "which this administration is not responsible," and asserts that the "offer" was made by Mr. Ford, "that the purchase price received by the Alabama Power company, $2,000,000, would be credited on his original offer of $5,000,000, if it is so wished."

Adjunct of Main Plant.

Mr. Weeks points out that the Gorgas steam plant "was only an adjunct of Muscle Shoals, being located 'ninety miles away on the Warrior river' in order to supply power during the completion of the water power plant.

The total expenditure on the development," Mr. Weeks' statement says, "was about $102,000,000, which less than $5,000,000 was spent upon this isolated and temporary steam plant.

The Alabama Power company, Mr. Weeks says, offered to pay $3,500,000 for the Gorgas plant, "a comparatively large portion of the whole equipment and the government agreed to accept this offer, which was the highest bid made to buy out the plant, second hand machinery from which they could not have realized more than $1,000,000, and that it must be borne in mind in the entire equipment that the government has secured $2,500,000, as against the $5,000,000 offered by Mr. Ford for the entire plant and equipment."

No Nitrate by Steam Power.

Secretary Weeks declares that he has the keenest interest in the development of air fixation of nitrates in assistance of the American farmer and in the adaptability of Muscle Shoals for this purpose, but asserts that even expert adviser has denied that Muscle Shoals "could ever economically make nitrates by the use of steam power."

FORD RECKLESS OF FACTS, SAYS WEEKS IN REPLY

GORGAS PLANT BUT ADJUNCT OF MUSCLE SHOALS.

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.
Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—(Special)—Secretary of War John W. Weeks today replied to the statement of Henry Ford relative to the sale of the Gorgas steam plant, part of the Muscle Shoals project, to the Alabama Power company.

The secretary characterized Mr. Ford's statement as "a personal attack on me" in connection with the conduct of the administration" and declared the statement is "filled with reckless assertions."

He suggested that Mr. Ford, relying as he does upon other persons in the conduct of so many enterprises, probably was not in possession of the real facts. He pointed out that the fact that Mr. Ford's office at Muscle Shoals has not been withdrawn should mean to indicate that he does not regard the Gorgas steam plant as necessary to him in the carrying out of his plan to purchase and develop Muscle Shoals water power.

Reply Is Hasty.

The secretary's statement, which was issued after two long conferences with President Coolidge, is much milder in tone than had been expected. For the most part it confines itself to a statement of the facts as they stand, with a review of the main points leading up to the sale of the Gorgas plant by the government to the Alabama Power company.

It points out that the original contract with the Alabama Power company, by which that concern was to have the right to purchase the Gorgas plant within a given time, was made by the Wilson Administration, for which this administration is not responsible" and asserts that the "war department had informed Mr. Ford that the purchase price received from the Alabama Power company, $2,500,000, would be credited on his original order of $5,000,000, if it was so wished.

"Adjunct of Main Plant."

Mr. Weeks points out that the Gorgas steam plant "only an adjunct" of Muscle Shoals, being erected "several miles away on the Warrior river" in order to supply power during the completion of the water power plant.

"The total expenditure on these properties," Mr. Weeks' statement says, "was about $102,000,000, of which less than $25,000,000 was spent upon this isolated and temporary steam plant."

The Alabama Power company, Mr. Weeks says, offered to pay $2,500,000 for the Gorgas plant, "a comparatively small item of the whole equipment" and the government had an option to accept this offer, which was the highest made, to salvage the plant as second hand machinery, from which they could not be relieved, more than $1,000,000, and that "it must be borne in mind that for this single item in the entire equipment the government has secured $2,500,000, as against the $5,000,000 offered by Mr. Ford for the entire plant and equipment."

"No Nitrate by Steam Power."

Secretary Weeks declares that he has the keenest interest in the development of air fixation of nitrogen in assistance of the American farmer and the Midwest section of the Society of Automotive Engineers. Ethyl fluid, "it is claimed, increases efficiency and takes the knock out of automobile engines. It gives gasoline a light wine color.

F. L. WRIGHT HAS SCHEME TO END BEDLAM IN LOOP

Would Slash Tops Off Skyscrapers.

Frank Lloyd Wright, the architect, arrived in Chicago yesterday from Los Angeles. He was choked by Chicago smoke, but happy because his hotel, the Imperial, was the only major building that withstood the Japanese earthquake. He was filled with a plan, he says, that will solve our traffic problems.

But Mr. Wright will not tarry here. He left off today for Indian summer in Wisconsin. He presented his solution to the reporter. Standing in his room at the Congress, Mr. Wright pointed down at Michigan avenue and laughed:

"Horrible Way We Live."

"That isn't a boulevard—it's a race track," he said. "Everybody is trying to get to the light. Terrible situation for our people. Stories will be told."

"I'll tell you how to cut this traffic problem which should be remedied. Take a gigantic knife and sweep it over your loop. Cut off your skyscrapers at the seventh floor. Spread out your loop. Spread out everything. With automobiles, electricity, the telephones and all the modern advantages you don't need concentration. You don't even have to have it, but that was in the days of steam. Now it is something different."

Say Giving, Architect's Job.

"If you cut down these terrible buildings, you'll have no traffic jams. You'll have trees again. You'll have all the joy in life, this city. After all that's the job for an architect—give the world a little joy."

Mr. Wright is living in California, educating the people there to build buildings that fit with the country.

"I want real homes there," he said.

WOMEN CAPTIVES OF CHINESE ARE GIVEN UP AS LOST

PAINT MAKERS SHOW FARMERS PROFIT IN FLAX

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

SHANGHAI, Oct. 12.—All hope of rescuing two British women missionaries—Misses Dalreich and Scrap, captured by Chinese bandits in Hwangtung on Sept. 29, has practically been abandoned, according to wire reports here.

The women were captured in the little town of Shihwan, Honan province, and from Hankow it is stated that orders sent in pursuit of the bandits are reported to be in league with the bandit chief and to have helped the bandits to escape.

The British have sent a consul to the scene, and a member of the China inland mission is bending every effort to rescue the captives. Much anxiety is felt here for the safety of the defenseless women prisoners in the hands of the bandits.

"Your plan of building in an earthquake country has been established," it read. "The Imperial stands. Yankee skyscrapers fell."

LLOYD GEORGE ON AMERICA AND WORLD PEACE.

Mr. Lloyd George tells a Tribune correspondent that the United States ought to join the League of Nations and he believes it will join in the near future. As Mr. Lloyd George is responsible, with M. Clemenceau and Mr. Wilson, for the establishment, such as it is, of the league, it is natural that he should look upon it, ostensibly at least, with the fond eyes of partisans. But we doubt his qualification for prediction of American action. The credit of the league in America is not, so far as we can observe, improving. As a marvelous contrivance for preventing war, the league does not look up very impressively from this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Lloyd George asserts that all it needs to function perfectly as advertised is the United States, and that the moment Uncle Sam sits down at the supreme council table world peace is certain. We can see M. Clemenceau's countenance when he reads that, and M. Poincaré's.

What Mr. Lloyd George is thinking of is not at all what our academic leaguists and internationalists have in mind. He speaks more plainly when he says an alliance of Great Britain and the United States can impose peace on the world. That may be, it probably is true, but the American people are not ready to assume the moral and material responsibility of such an imposition. Neither within the league nor without are we ready to say to France: You must give up the Rhine or to Germany: You must cease resistance and accept French dictation; or to Italy: You must give up Piemont; or to Greece: You must give up Crete or Smyrna—if you do not we shall declare war, military or economic or financial, on all combined.

When Mr. Lloyd George speaks of peace, imposed by a league with the United States holding the balance or by an English-speaking alliance, he assumes an identity of interest, of viewpoints, between our nation and his which does not exist. We have enough in common to keep our own peace, so far as any prediction in this changeful world may be hazarded, but each has particular interests of its own in which the other does not share and this is true especially of the far-reaching network of the British empire.

It is easy to conjure up a glowing picture of a Pax Anglo-American; if we are ready to assume that both nations are moved solely by selfless motives and a unique perception of ideal justice. But we cannot afford to be deceived by any such self-delusion into entering the mass of fierce ambitions, ancient suspicions, and rancors which we can see very clearly compose what the international politics of Europe is today, has been for centuries, and in all human probability will be tomorrow. Mr. Wilson went to Paris with precisely the expectations and intentions which Mr. Lloyd George revives to tempt us to repeat Mr. Wilson's experiment. Mr. Wilson offered in unqualified and unquestioned completeness precisely that disinterested influence which Mr. Lloyd George asserts would insure peace to Europe. We think the assurance comes charged with considerable irony from one who collaborated in the production of the treaty of Versailles. Why should we expect that if we returned to the counsels of Europe now, we could produce anything better?

Of course Mr. Lloyd George would differ with us as to the peace of Paris. For us it is not a matter for argument. We have observed the conference of Paris and its sequel and we have our opinion. The frequent suggestions we hear from foreign statesmen, including Mr. Lloyd George, that the warlike treaty has failed to bring forth fruits of peace and restoration simply because the United States refused to ratify and help impose its terms, does not impress us. The treaty of Versailles was a resounding political forces of Europe, in which it has been our wise policy not to entangle ourselves. Far from being conscientious scruples for having refused to help impose it, the American people, save for a small minority of impractical and of partisans, are thankful they have kept clear. As time has unrolled its demonstration our thankfulness has increased and we have no idea today that the panacea for Europe's woes is in our keeping.

THE ONLY SOLUTION OF OUR TRACTION PROBLEM.

City authorities and local traction authorities are again entertaining themselves by discussing the purchase of the Chicago traction lines. Each side announces itself ready to go ahead with the transfer of these antiquated systems of transportation upon "a fair and reasonable offer." What of it?

What difference does it make to the clerk or sales woman who swings from a strap in an overcrowded and halting street car to get to business this morning whether that strap is owned by the city or by some private stockholders? What the strap-hanger wants is speed and comfort in travel between home and business. Whatever one's faith or lack of faith in the theory of municipal ownership may be, every car rider knows that speed and comfort in Chicago transportation cannot be obtained on the present system, regardless of who owns or operates it.

Public officials continue to make ownership the point. That is an error which has been holding back Chicago for twenty years. Improved transportation ought to be the point. It can be obtained only by building a subway. We have the money with which to start that work. Why not do it instead of debating innumerable and futile show-who should own the junk which now furnishes with transportation, so-called?

Build the subway now, and the ownership of "L" and Surface lines will take care of itself, with modern competition the city can bid them in at a bargain.

ROUGH STUFF BY FORD.

Henry Ford, Jewish because the federal authorities have lived up to their agreement with the Alabama Power company and sold the Georgia steam plant and transmission lines at Muscle Shoals to that concern for $2,474,487, has issued a statement bitterly denouncing Secretary of War Weeks, and reflecting upon his official integrity. He accuses Mr. Weeks of attempting to break up Muscle Shoals property and of thus destroying "the greatest single project ever held out to the American farmer and manufacturer."

"Muscle Shoals should be the greatest munition plant on earth," he says, and intimates that therefore it should be placed under the Ford control and management, to make fertilizer and turn factory wheels while awaiting a call to produce munitions.

Just why the government should put "the greatest munition plant on earth" in the hands of the man who conceived the peace ship is not disclosed. Just why Secretary Weeks should be denounced for keeping the government's pledge to allow the Alabama Power company to buy a steam plant built on its own property with the understanding that it could be thus purchased, is not clear. The whole statement is a mass of accusation and innuendo evidently inspired by thwarted ambition.

It attempts to rally the farmers of the country to the support of Ford against the government by the mad assertion that they are being basely deprived of unlimited fertilizer at negligible cost. It ignores the details of his fertilizer proposition, which was merely that he would make some fertilizer and sell it to the farmers at 5 per cent profit.

What Ford actually offered in payment for the $90,000,000 government investment already made, plus rights, was $15,000,000. In addition, he would have paid 4 per cent interest on other government millions needed to complete the hydroelectric developments. And for that he asked a lease of 100 years duration, contrary to the federal law which limits all such leases to fifty years. Also he would have it free of all regulation or control by public authority, which is also contrary to federal law.

The government has received from the Alabama Power company for one steam plant built on its own land more than two thirds the cash offered by Ford for the entire Muscle Shoals development. If Ford offered as much for the Gorges plant he would be offering only $1,500,000 cash and about 2½ per cent interest on all the rest of the improvements, including three great dams, hydro-electric plants, nitrate plants, and supplementary steam plants, representing a cash government outlay of approximately $100,000,000. And in that offer he has asked the government to break its own laws and its own pledge. He's getting rough when he pretends to denounce the secretary of war in such circumstances.

It may not be long until the pipe is brought into the carts—O. O. McIntyre in the Post.

AMONG the places where the pipe belongs are what the O. O. can call other places where the pipe belongs are all other places where smoking is permitted, allowed, or put up with. The notion that the pipe is "national" is American; what Woodrow called "free men everywhere" smoke pipes wherever they may smoke cigars or cigarettes. This is notably in England, whose social habits are probably supposed to evoke the average American's talents as a copyist. An odd restaurant or two in London prefers that men do their pipe-smoking in the grill-room; and the preference is, as you say, on getting the bird from the women.

Conditions are so different, organization so improved, instruction and officer personnel so much better selected, that all of the best and little or nothing of the worst of the wartime camps is retained. By the same token, the value of the citizens' camp to the nation as well as to the individual is correspondingly enhanced.

With thousands of young men turned out annually by these Citizens' Military Training Camps under the direction of such men as Gen. Pershing, Gen. Moseley, and Gen. Hale, this country will have a nucleus of potential officers for any future emergency which must eliminate a large part of the errors and hardships of the hastily organized and haphazard camps of 1917 and 1918. That is something to which patriotic parents and patriotic young men in this country should give serious thought.

The benefit to the individual, the lessons in hygiene, the lessons in etiquette, the discipline, the greater, self-respect, the improved physical and mental vigor produced in the camp will repay him more than adequately for time employed.

The benefit to the nation in developing a growing group of the highest type of citizens will repay the nation. Such work deserves the enthusiastic support of all public authorities, patriotic organizations, and private citizens.

TAXES AND DEFENSES.

(Bloomington Paragraph.)

Everybody will say "amen" to the statement that government taxation should be revised downward. But not everybody will say amen to the kindred declaration that the government should restrict its activities. On the contrary, hundreds and thousands of citizens are saying that the government should expand its activities so that it should go into new lines of business, that it should create more boards or commissions, that it should "regulate" this or that which is not now regulated.

To be continued, every citizen who advocates the government taking on new lines of work should accompany the request with a statement something like this: "And, if necessary, accordingly."

Then, since each citizen must pay his share of the tax assessment, when day one tries to get the government to do something else, he should be told that he had better be prepared to be taxed, and then add: "You may increase my taxes in the proper ratio to get this work done."

But usually the same individuals or organizations which demand more government activity, also demand less governmental expense, or, in other words, lower taxes.

TOO EASY.

BETHEOVEN's Fifth, to us, seems a modern masterpiece, what back in '90 we thought it was intellectual to call fin-de-siecle; since it is juxtaposed with the deliberated recklessness of (say) Rimsky-Korsakoff's fine and formidably Spanish Caprice; and it is the sheer perfection of Beethoven's structure that induces the mood in us.

MR. STOCK is always engaging and profitable in his aspect as composer; and he may take a tall heap of consolation from the knowledge,—now exemplified last season,—that his clientele grows, with a reasonable allowance of time, to catch up with him.

AN idiom which is distinctively his marks the May, which is elegiac, and isn't depressive, and finds its way to a climax as stirring as that in "Les Preludes," which is our notion of saying something nice. It is, maybe, merely our notion, that the composition is a bit long—for its avowed objective, that is: not for musical interest. And it puts into exciting use all the tonal resources of nowadays orchestration.

DEMOCRATS KEEP SITTING JUDGES OFF THE "STUMP"

Action Draws Protest of "New" Candidate.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The Democratic county managing committee yesterday voted to keep the judicial election out of world politics during the present campaign.

Upon the initiative of George E. Brown, the committee passed a resolution that it was the sense of the organization that the six Democratic judges of the Superior court who are candidates for reelection should not take the stump at ward meetings.

The committee also decided at a meeting of Republicans yesterday with the leaders of that party, and definite action probably will be taken on Monday.

Sitting judges who were present were opposed to taking an active part in the campaign, and the leaders indicated they would take the same position.

How Brennan Puts It.

At the Democratic session, Brennan pointed out that it would be wrong for a judge to descend from the bench and make a political speech, or even by his silence in a ward meeting be placed in the position of a partisan applicant for votes and then to remount the bench and don the mantle of nonpartisanship.

"We are on record," he said, "as standing firmly by the principle of keeping the judges out of politics. It was for that reason we offered the six sitting judges places on the Democratic ticket." Brennan held that judges should not demean themselves by campaigning for reelection. There may be some of us who feel that there would be political advantage in having the judges appear at meetings and make speeches, but if so we should bow to public opinion.

Others Voice Protest.

Other speakers, largely on the score of practicality, differed with Brennan. One, a new candidate, announced he couldn't see his way clear to speak for sitting judges unless they were doing as much for the rest of the ticket. Another, a ward leader, said it would be difficult to arouse enthusiasm among precinct workers unless all candidates appeared at meetings. It was suggested that the problem be left for the sitting judges to decide for themselves.

"No," objected Chairman Martin J. O'Brien, "that would be unfair to them. The responsibility for the decision is on us."

There was some division of opinion among the sitting judges, but the majority who were present felt that political campaigning was incompatible with the accepted tenets of judicial conduct.

At the Republican meeting the candidates were left alone to decide for themselves the extent and methods of the campaign. As far as their attitude was concerned, the campaign was to be a quiet one. They voted to name a committee of their own to cooperate with the campaign managers, with whom they will meet on Monday.

CORONER HOLDS 4 RESPONSIBLE FOR 5 WHISKY DEATHS

Pana Grand Jury to Meet Monday.

Pana, Ill., Oct. 12.—(Special)—A verdict headed by Mrs. Lavinia L. Danford, coroner, this afternoon returned a verdict accusing four Pana citizens of murder in connection with the deaths here yesterday and last night of five men following a moonshining orgy Wednesday evening.

The verdict found that the five came to their deaths "from fuel oil poisoning as the result of drinking poisoned or wood alcohol, liquor as a beverage."

It was recommended that the four men accused be held to the grand jury with both men.

The four are John Tokoly, proprietor of a soft drink parlor, who is said to be jury recommended.

have supplied the lethal liquor; his sons, Stephen, 22, and Paul, 20, and Robert A. Smith, 26, local chemist.

Inspectors called agreed.

Tokoly, who collapsed in the inquest, is under arrest. His son, Stephen, who was in the fatal party, is totally blind and dying in a local hospital according to his physician. Deputy sheriffs are holding him, and if he recovers, he will be placed in jail.

Paul Tokoly has disappeared, and is said to be hidden by relatives here. Smith left Pana just before the inquest, telling his wife he was going to Peoria, Ill. Authorities are hunting both men.

Widow Blames John Tokoly.

Among the witnesses this afternoon was Mrs. Jeanette Baldwin, widow by the poisoned whisky. She said her son's dying statement was that Tokoly's "liquor" was purchased from John Tokoly.

Irving Vaughan.
Old Urban "Red" Faber did it yesterday. Coming out of a month's retirement, the man of many battles showed the stuff of which real heroes are made, turned back the peppy Cubs and led his White Sox canteen their first victory in the city series. Faber had his triumph by 4 to 2 and 26,129 fans packed the north side park to see it happen.

Faber was good because he had control. He walked the first batter to face him and for a few moments it seemed as if he was to give his customary bad opening inning, but after that he was seldom in the hole and had almost three free transportation. He worked the outside corners continually, sometimes with low fast and at others with his famed "spitter" and the Cubs apparently didn't like that kind of hurling.

See Rout Vie Koen.

It was what happened to none other than the Koen, one of Hill's best hurlers, that made the two runs of Faber useless. The "Parson," with a lead of 2 to 1 that looked good, in view of three hits given up after a hard battle in the fifth, lost control after he thought Ump. Quigley had missed a strikeout, and had to retire with two runs across and the sacks jammed.

Fussell hurried to the front in the above crisis and the three runners on the sacks never moved. The damage had been done, however, and after a double play had put paid to the Cubs from scoring despite two singles and a double in the sixth, Faber simply breezed through, not a Bruin batter reaching first base in the last three innings. Meanwhile, the Sox picked one tally off Fussell with the aid of a wild pitch in the seventh, and in the ninth and ninth did nothing, despite the openings given them by the erratic Osborne.

Friborg Hits Home Run.

Off "Old Red" the Cubs were able to blow themselves to only a half dozen hits. One of these was a decidedly healthy clout by Barney Friborg in the fourth. After Faber had buried three straight balls to Grimes and then fanned him, Friborg caught one, and hit and ran and sailed away into the left field seats to give the Cubs the 2 to 1 advantage that Koen left far away in the fifth.

In the number of bungles delivered the Sox didn't do much better than their foes—getting only eight—but they did produce them in bunches. The peculiar thing about their hitting was that most of it came out of the tops of the bunting header. The veteran Anna Stunk, leading off, exploded two and scored twice; when removed in favor of Barrett when Fussell took up the hurling, Barrett maintained Strunk's pace with two more bungles. Meanwhile Hooper had helped himself to a pair of singles, which figured in scoring episodes.

Score Early on Keen.

The way the Sox started indicated they had been tipped off to something Keen was up to. The first game went to the wire and he cracked it for a single through short. Then Hooper hit the ball to right for one case and Ward legged it to third. Collins bunted on the first pitch and sent Ward into deep center for the catch, but Ward had to leave the game. He had to leave the game again, but it did not go far. After Keen had turned out excellent second and third rounds, the Cubs came in with their first hits in the home third, and tied it. O'Farrell had a low fly behind first base and a fly out of reach for a single, whereupon Keen sacrificed. Stats followed with a screaming line drive to right, but the ball popped out to the wire and Strunk fumbled. Another run looked like a cinch, but when "Duke" and both Adams and Granham popped to Collins.

Here Is How Sox Caught. Faber's home in the fourth put the Cub following on easy street until Keen led off in the fifth with a line drive to left center. Faber mercifully hit to third and Strunk dropped the ball, single and bounded home. Keen and Adams. Then Hooper and Collins walked to load the bases. Keen was still wobbly when Shibley and he too, but he fanned and fanned him to right.

For the third time, the third round, Fussell southpaw only one hit his mate against him and it brought the last run. Barrett delivered it in the seventh, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on a couple of infield out-

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Inter-sectional clashes between Notre Dame and the Army at Brooklyn, and Ohio State at Columbus, Vanderbilt, and Michigan at Ann Arbor, and struggles which will bring teams from the two conferences into today's football contests will feature today's football.

Although the struggle between Purdue and Iowa on the latter's gridiron and the one between Northwestern and Indiana at Indianapolis will command attention of followers of Big Ten football, the battle between Notre Dame and the Army will be followed by every person closely identified with the king of college sports.

Last year these powerful machines battled to a scoreless tie in one of the hardest fought games played along the Atlantic seaboard. Both have shown improvement this year with the result another of those interesting combats should take place before the very throng of Bobbs' baseball park in Brooklyn.

Notre Dame Team Light.

Both eleven men best suited this year and the coaches have a wholesale contract for the other's team. Coach Rockne has a lighter squad than usual, but will rely upon speed and craftsmanship to bring about the desired result. The cadets undoubtedly will launch a powerful line and running attack which will not be easily stopped.

The Purple will present a formidable front against Ohio State. Coaches who have seen Colgate in action this year declare it to be one of the best teams in the section and if the Buckeyes are able to hold their own they will be entitled to a world of credit. It is a hard game, and especially coming as it does on a week day, the football game with Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Cadet Wilson undoubtedly will try to bait the cardinals with an overhand attack, as it is assuming too much of Ohio State to make ground continuously through the big Colgate line or off its tackles. However, plays will be sent into the visitors' forward wall for variation, but the forward pass should be about Ohio's chief weapon.

Vanderbilt at Michigan.

Whether Michigan will cut loose against Vanderbilt is not known, but Tom had his work cut out for him and will have to earn his marred by a dozen. Eleven eleven battled to a scoreless tie a year ago at Nashville and the Michigan players are anxious to wipe out that score, which deprived them of consideration as a national champion.

A great struggle should take place at Indiana between Northwestern and Indiana. The Hoosiers lost to DePaul a week ago, while the Purple was victorious over Beloit. Whether Indiana has recovered from its setback and has learned enough football during the week the prime factor which will decide the issue. Northwestern is a team of possibilities and is sure to improve the second year on Oct. 20.

Another Test for Gophers.

Minnesota, which failed to make an impressive showing against Ames a week ago, will be put to the test by taking on the Haskell Indians. The Gophers must show some improvement to be considered a championship contender, if not Coach Spuhler can round his cripples, including Capt. Martinian, into shape. Minnesota will be a different team than the one which faced Ames last Saturday.

Michigan Argies will be Wisconsin's opponent at Madison. In the Badgers' last game, when they go into action against Indiana on Oct. 20, the Badgers will be 20 to 10, and Coach Supplee undoubtedly will seek revenge. Butler will present a wonderful field goal kicker in Griggs, who is dangerous any place inside the 20-yard line.

IOWA STAR IN HOSPITAL.

Iowa City, Oct. 11.—(Special)—Burke, star halfback for the Hawkeyes, James Ladd, forward on the Iowa quintet that tied with Wisconsin, was taken to the University hospital in Iowa City yesterday. No serious injuries are anticipated.

Harvey T. Woodruff, Help! Help!

Registering Disappointment.

At the International Air races in St. Louis, which I attended, it was announced that Miss Baker, who appeared in white tights, would "take off." Well, I hung around for two hours, and all she did was to fly away in a car.

The squad, consisting of thirty-three men, will remain there until tomorrow morning.

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special]—Confident they will triumph in their annual contest with the Army at Ebbe's field, Brooklyn, tomorrow, the Notre Dame football team, led by coach Frank Rockne, arrived at the Worcester-Baltimore club at Bay, N. Y., early today.

The squad, consisting of thirty-three men, will remain there until tomorrow morning.

Immediately after arriving, the team on the Polo field. While the players are confident they will lower the colors of the Army, Rockne is not so optimistic concerning the outcome.

Knute declared that while he expects Notre Dame to give a good account of itself, he believed it would be lucky to turn to hold the heavy West Point eleven to a tie.

Army Team Is Ready.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 12.—[Special]—The corps of cadets, led by the camp of the Chicago Cardinals, to tomorrow's football game, the husky Indians, who are billed to meet Army Driscoll's eleven in the third National league championship encounter of the season at Normal park, 61st street and Racine avenue. The Akronites are coming with a reputation for terrific charging, but the Cardinals forward, all big, powerful fellows, are considered to be the ones making the assault of the "purple squad."

The Cardinals will present the same line-up that flattened the Buffalo All-Americans and ran roughshod over Rochester. Akron will line up with Daum and Nesser on the ends; Scott and Flower at tackles; Jean and Wallace at guards. Mike, the center, has a broken leg, Capt. Nelson, Benson, Myers and McGraw will be on the bench.

Another Swim Record Goes to Miss Ederle

HONOLULU, Oct. 12.—[Special]—Associated Press.—Another world's swimming record was smashed by Gertrude Ederle of the New York Yacht and Swimming Club, when she swam the 100 meters from style event in 1:12.14 at last night's session of the A. A. U. meet here. On the previous night she hung up a new record for the 200 meter open water swim.

Miss Ederle shared honors with Warren Kealoha, who swam the 100 meter men's back stroke in 1:13.35, breaking his own world's record of 1:14.45 which he made at the Olympic games.

The Lady of Pentlands

By ELIZABETH JORDAN.

SYNOPSIS. Valerie Knight has spent the greater part of her life globe-trotting with her father. Her mother died when she was a child, and she and her father have made only occasional visits to New York. On their last visit to the city Joseph Knight dies suddenly in a hotel. Just before his death he confides to Valerie that he is dying without leaving her a cent.

An old school friend of Valerie's (Anne Sterling) comes to the rescue, pays all Valerie's bills, and takes the girl into her house. After the first sharp pain of her father's death has worn off, Valerie begins the only treasure she owns—a string of pearls, and repays Anne. She tells Anne she must leave the house and try to earn her living. Anne begs her to stay on. In the midst of their discomfiture, Roger, an intimate friend of the Sterling family, comes to call, and invites the Sterlings and Valerie to spend the weekend at his home—Pentlands. He offers Valerie a position there. Gordon is a widower with two children—a boy and a girl.

After Gordon leaves, Anne tells Valerie he promised his wife on their deathbed he would never marry again. Anne also intimates there is something mysterious about Pentlands but admits she doesn't know what it is.

The following day Valerie arrives at Pentlands with Gordon. The morning after their arrival Gordon asks Valerie to marry him, putting his proposal on a business basis and requesting Valerie to defer her decision until the end of her visit. Valerie learns that some of the mysterious happenings at Pentlands center about the rooms she occupies, as well as the nursery.

Anne tells Valerie that the children's aunt, Lee Cottington, their mother's sister, is still present living in Paris and is estranged from Bruce.

Genevieve, Gordon's little daughter, disappears while her father and his guests are out riding. Betty Sterling, who was with her at the time of her disappearance, becomes ill from the shock.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

THE MYSTERIOUS HAND.

Throughout forty years of domestic service the highest ambition of David McTavish had been to present an unruled front to the world around him—to be superior, as a super-servant should, to all crises of domestic life. Illness, even death, at Pentlands had, found him a rock for the household to cling to. It was to McTavish that Gordon himself had clung under the first shock of his father's sudden and violent passing. But illness and death were normal things. What had happened today was a new experience for McTavish. He had met it acceptably, but to describe it was another thing. He cleared his throat as Gordon asked him how long Genevieve had been missing.

"More than two hours, sir," he said.

"What?" Gordon rose from the fender and stared at him.

"Yes, sir, more than two hours. She has only been back about fifteen minutes, though I needn't tell you every man and woman on the place has been looking for her and every possible hiding place has been gone into."

Gordon sat down again, heavily.

"Where has she been?" he asked, dully.

"No one knows, sir."

"Won't she tell?"

"No, sir. She appeared in the nursery as cool as you please. No one saw her come back, and she didn't seem to know she had been away. It was just like it was the other times."

Valerie looked in wonder from the face of the old Scotswoman to that of his master. Both men had apparently forgotten her. Both men were very serious—far too serious, she thought, over such a simple incident. What was it, after all, but a runaway adventure of a rather abnormal child who had chosen to hide herself and upset the household? As to hiding places, there were dozens of places at Pentlands where an entire kindergarten could hide. Valerie decided she would go upstairs, look in on Betty, and perhaps take a nap before dinner. She was about to rise when the head-B. G.'s next question arrested the progress of inquiry she was attending was not yet ended.

"Was there anything in today's affair in any way different from the other episodes, Mr. Tarish?" he asked. "Aside, I mean, from Betty's presence and scars?"

Again McTavish hesitated. There was a stranger present. He would greatly have preferred to make the rest of his report to his master, but the latter read the wish. He repeated his question more urgently. "Was there anything different?"

McTavish thrust out his under lip.

"Yes, sir. It sounds absurd, sir, but it has had a bad effect on the household. A great many heard Miss Betty crying, and those that heard her words repeated them to those that didn't. The result is that the servants are badly upset."

"Naturelly, they would be. It doesn't take much to upset them—the fools!"

Gordon spoke with fierce irritation, then checked himself. "What did Betty say?" he ended, more quietly.

"With kindest regards, as ever.

"Sincerely,

MARY PICKFORD."

Miss Pickford Accepts Trib Juliet Vote

Refuses Miss Talmadge's Offer to Withdraw.

By Mae Tinde.

Good morning!

I have a pretty little story to tell you that ought to restore some of your faith in human nature and that SHOULD make you feel tenderly toward the picture people who have recently been more or less on your black-list.

Remember our "Romeo and Juliet" contest? After it was over I received a pleasant little note from Mary Pickford asking if I might tell the vote that she had given as it did. I replied that possibly the reason was due to the fact that Miss Talmadge makes more pictures a year than she does, and is consequently more in the public eye, and is more dramatic in her performances.

Wallace McDonald will have the role of a dashing captain in the coming Nipper production "The Name Is Woman."

Another lesson we learned was the kindness and good will of Americans.

We learned steel and cement will stand the strain of the earth tremors.

The brick buildings crumbled and the wooden ones collapsed and burned. We also learned there was safety in the spaces like the parks. This means Tokio is better prepared for an earthquake than any other city in America.

We are planning reconstruction on the basis of a city of 5,000,000, and we believe the future Tokio will be as much finer than the old Tokio as present day Chicago is greater than this city was before the great fire.

NEW

MOVEMENT OF FARMERS, WEST TO EAST, FOUND

BY SCRUTATOR.

An interesting side light is thrown on the question of high freight rates, the inevitable result of higher rail operating costs, in a recent observational report of the agents of the National Farmers' Organization. The author, who has been looking into the condition of the farmers in the eastern states—the region of "abandoned farms." He says:

"Some revival of the movement of western farmers eastward is again apparent. Newcomers from the central west are being pointed out in certain sections of New York and New England. This represents some reflex movement, but less depression of two and three years ago."

It may represent a great deal more. It continues to point to a re-Americanization of the eastern states. It seems to be closely associated with conditions disclosed by the last census in regard to tenancy. The increase of tenant farmers for the eastern states, a whole segment of the population, has been halted, like the movement of women into industry, by the entry of men into agriculture. The entry of men into agriculture has been held back, with its expensive land, labor, use of costly machinery and taxes of increasing size, tenantry has been on the increase.

At the same time the high freight rates and the market distances from the market cities of corn belt states as compared to farms in the swarming north Atlantic seaboard, gives the eastern farmer an advantage.

It was the cheap transportation of the Erie canal that dominated the population and agricultural development of the last century. Decimated, the agriculture of the seaboard, a reversal of the movement, to a slight extent at least, is now possible.

The government observer notes: "Transportation is going through a period of change. Motor trucks have taken over considerable parts of the market. The railroads have had to local branch line railroads. One effect of the spread of trucks has been to widen the market for perishables. It is now a common sight to see truckload of seasonal vegetables or fruit being disposed of and the trucks may have come fifty miles or more. The new commercial marketing ten times the area of other days. Of course, this also is true in the midwest. Trucks come from Detroit to Benton Harbor for grapes."

The program of road building is another factor of importance and related to see substantial farmers drop their farm work and go to work for wages on the highways, saying they can make more money at the latter. The country community is, generally speaking, embarked on a considerable program of public improvements.

Besides roads and bridges, new schools, courthouses and post offices are going up everywhere. As individual people are all complaining about taxes, as communities, they are voting more public expenditures with every sunrise. In fact, one gets the impression, in the east, that while times have not been good times for the individual farmers, nevertheless the community has been making steady progress.

"Men are forced to rigid economy on their own farms; but they travel over better roads, send their children to better schools, have better public buildings to live in, closer contact with doctors, better medical assistance, and better care of the orphans and the aged than in pre-war days. Physical equipment on the farms is scarcely being maintained. Physical equipment belonging to the community has notably improved."

All that is in marked contrast to the general tenor of government bureau reports. To read most of them is to get the impression that all the old war horses of the muck rakers and the fading stars of the soap sisterhood have obtained permanent berths and are now living in comfort and ease. In recent months the writer has read reams of weeps prepared in the government printing office over Mexican mothers working in the best fields while their babies kick up their heels on the sidelines. The fact that canal boat children sometimes fall into the water and catch cold has been duly noted by the government. These minor children often have to bathe in the tub in front of the kitchen stove officially deployed by the proper government bureau.

It may be heartless to make light of such stories, but it is the fact that no man in the country had ever thought of his bathroom the Mayflower would have been an oil burner and Daniel Boone a lounge lizard. Certainly nobody ever saw, even in an antique shop, any plumbing brought over in the Mayflower, despite the enormous carrying capacity that enabled her to bring over more stuff than the Leviathan ever did.

U.S. PROSPERITY STRIDES AHEAD: STATE IN STEPS

Roads, Buildings, and Steel Factors.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

October registers a halt in unemployment. Full activities are taking up the summer slack. Hard road building is serving as a job reservoir and throughout the country is giving work to great numbers of semiskilled and common laborers who otherwise would be jobless.

Steel industries are averaging about the same speed as a month ago. In September steel and iron surged 11 per cent in employment, while textile picked up 14.4 per cent. Building construction seems to have sidestepped the slump which some were predicting, and in nearly all the large cities it is maintaining the old steady pace. Such is the picture sketched by the employment service of the United States department of labor in its monthly survey, which says that on Oct. 1 "very little unemployment is reported."

Illinois Conditions Good.

Harvey Cohen, district director, reports that in Illinois conditions in October are much better than they have been for months.

"Very little voluntary unemployment is reported," he says, "and practically all industries seem to be gradually increasing their pay rolls. Steel building construction is well along, especially during the summer months, and is going ahead, with every indication of again resuming production next building boom." An acute shortage of building trades mechanics exists. Coal output has increased substantially, reflecting additional employment.

In Chicago, steel operations are holding up well. The mills are operating at about 80 per cent of capacity, twenty-three out of twenty-four blast furnaces are working. Building activities, as measured by permits and suspending all former records. Building contracts so far this year show a 30 per cent increase over last year.

Pay Roll Gains Are Given.

More money is paid in the pay envelopes of Illinois industries in September than in August, although somewhat fewer hands were on the pay rolls. Average weekly earnings for factory workers in the state were $27.72, as against $26.76 in August, an increase of approximately a dollar. They stood $2.24 a week higher than a year ago when factory wages averaged $25.52.

For all industries, the average weekly earnings were $22.27 in September, as against $22.25 in August and $21.36 in September, 1922.

These figures are from the monthly survey issued last night by the general advisory board of the Illinois department of labor.

Reports from 1,284 Illinois concerns show these establishments had 241,251 workers last September as against 202,745 in September, 1922, an expansion of 19,506 more workers, or over 11 per cent for these concerns alone, during the year.

A Survey of the Midwest.

Out of sixty-five industrial centers, twenty-eight reported employment increases Oct. 1, while thirty-six and decreases. Chicago was among the decreasing cities, but the rate of unemployment was reported as smaller than in recent months.

The following survey gives an outline of conditions in the midwest:

ILLINOIS DOWNSTATE

St. Louis—Employment continues steady; labor supply equals the demand. A slight increase in packing house pay rolls. All plants are running.

Springfield, Ill.—Shortage of farm help and a slight shortage in common labor exist. Increased activities are noticeable in the tea mining industry.

Joliet—A surplus of common labor here. All of the larger plants are working full time.

Danvers—Industrial conditions are very good. Practically all plants are running full time, with some working overtime. Considerable improvement is noted in coal mining. Nearly all of the mines in this locality are working every day. Overtime prevails in iron, metal, and corn products industries.

Elgin—Supply of workers equals demand. All plants are operating and a local watch company is working overtime.

Bloomington—Employment conditions improving, but agricultural impairment causes depression. Building economy good. Mining—employment outlook good. Total change is fully employed. Little change in the number of jobs, decrease 4.4
